

Kids Explore!

Design a Bug

Imagine there was a huge wind storm, and a bunch of insects got tossed and tumbled so much that all their parts traded places.

What new bugs do you see in your imagination? A dragonfly with butterfly wings and grasshopper legs? An ant with a bee stinger and a beetle body? Or something else entirely!

On a blank piece of paper, draw your new insect. It should have three body parts in this order—head, thorax, abdomen—and six legs attached to the thorax. Many insects also have wings and antennae.

Give your bug a name and send us a picture of it!

